The U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) on Tuesday asked to intervene in a lawsuit alleging Pfizer committed fraud during clinical trials for the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine.

The DOJ simultaneously asked the court to dismiss the lawsuit, which was filed by whistleblower Brook Jackson, against Pfizer.

"The United States should not be required to expend resources on a case that is inconsistent with its public health policy," the DOJ said in its motion to dismiss.

Jackson told The Defender the DOJ's motion was "expected" and "will clarify the standards for good cause being applied" regarding the U.S. government's justification for "allowing Pfizer to commit fraud on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration" (FDA).

"This fraud has undoubtedly cost American taxpayers billions of dollars and has led to an untold number of injuries from the COVID-19 countermeasure, including permanent disability and death among my fellow citizens," Jackson said.

Jackson is a former employee of the Ventavia Research Group, an independent lab that conducted some of the clinical trials for the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine.

In January 2021, she sued Pfizer, Ventavia and ICON plc, another Pfizer contractor, alleging the companies committed numerous violations of the False Claims Act during the trials.

In September 2022, Jackson filed an amended complaint, which was dismissed in April 2023. She subsequently filed a second amended complaint in October 2023, prompting the DOJ to claim it "has good cause to intervene and is entitled to dismissal" of the case.

Oral arguments in the case are scheduled for April 17 before the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Texas Beaumont Division.

Sasha Latypova, a former pharmaceutical industry executive with 25 years of experience in pharmaceutical research and development, told The Defender, "The case alleges that Pfizer committed fraud in order to get the contract for COVID-19 vaccines from the U.S. government while knowingly delivering a defective product."

"The fraud that Jackson describes … has not been disputed by Pfizer," Latypova said.

Robert Barnes, one of the lawyers representing Jackson, spoke at a March 8 presentation of the Vaccine Safety Research Foundation, where he said, "Any and every form of fraud they could commit, they did," referring to Pfizer.

"[Jackson] discovered it, uncovered it and went through the appropriate internal review protocols and assumed that people would correct the defects," Barnes said. "And instead of that occurring, she was summarily fired."

ORDER NOW

'Pfizer lied in order to get paid'

The DOJ's motion to dismiss states that Jackson "alleged that defendants violated the protocol for the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine clinical trial at three study sites in Texas and that defendant Pfizer misrepresented the safety and efficacy of the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA)."

Jackson filed her lawsuit under the False Claims Act, which allows the government or a party suing on its behalf, such as Jackson, to attempt to recover money for false claims made by parties in an attempt to secure payment from the government.

Those parties, such as Pfizer-BioNTech, can be held liable under the act if they knowingly made a false claim or used a false record or statement to secure payment.

According to the DOJ's filing, the False Claims Act "requires the United States to notify the court whether it will intervene in the qui tam action or decline to take over the action," following "a period of investigation." A qui tam action refers to any legal case where a private citizen initiates legal action on behalf of a state.

The government may choose whether to intervene in qui tam cases. If it does, it may then proceed with the lawsuit instead of the citizen who originally filed the claim — known as a "relator."

The government may subsequently opt to settle the case or to file a motion to dismiss, which the DOJ did.

The DOJ claims the U.S. "has good cause to intervene for the purpose of dismissal" based on U.S. Supreme Court precedent in a June 2023 ruling, United States ex rel. Polansky v. Executive Health Resources Inc., et al., that said the government may intervene and move to dismiss a False Claims Act case at any time in the life of the case.

The DOJ further claimed that the U.S. government has good cause to intervene in the case because it has access to the same clinical trial data, adverse event data and other scientific research Jackson refers to in her complaint.

To support the DOJ's claims, the motion cites a Jan. 5, 2024, JAMA editorial authored by FDA Commissioner Robert Califf and the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research Director Peter Marks, claiming that:

> "Contrary to a wealth of misinformation available on social media and the internet, data from various studies indicate that since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic tens of millions of lives were saved by vaccination."

The DOJ also argued that, if the case is allowed to continue, the discovery process and ongoing legal proceedings "will impose a significant burden on FDA, HHS [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services], and DOJ."

Referring to the Supreme Court's Polansky ruling, Jackson said:

> "The government came in at the very last moment and did what they're doing in this case, trying to get rid of it.
> "So, it went all the way to the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court ruled that based on the False Claims Act, the government has the ultimate authority to do whatever it wants to do in a sense. But again, having to show … good cause."

Latypova said that once a case is filed under the False Claims Act, "it immediately goes under seal for an initial 60 days." After this, "The government has 60 days to decide whether to intervene in the case or not. They could have intervened and dismissed or they could have declined to intervene and not dismiss."

According to Jackson, "In February 2022, after keeping the case sealed and investigating the allegations for nearly 14 months, the government chose not to intervene but did not move to dismiss either. The case was then unsealed, allowing me to proceed with the action on my own, acting on behalf of the U.S."

"The Justice Department waited until the last minute before the first round of dismissal hearings before the judge, and they made a very rare intervention, but not a full intervention," Barnes said. "They attempted that and it partially worked," he added, referring to the initial April 2023 dismissal of Jackson's lawsuit.

Barnes added:

> "We succeeded in getting the judge to reconsider his ruling, and he reinstated the fraud and the inducement claim, because that's what the claim is fundamentally about — that Pfizer lied in order to get paid. They lied about what they were delivering. They said what they were delivering was safe. It wasn't."

Barnes said that under the U.S. government's contract with Pfizer, the U.S. was "not paying for a therapeutic, they were not paying for a diagnostic, they were paying for something that would inoculate. And of course, this never did."

According to Latypova, by waiting until now to file a motion to intervene, based on the Polansky ruling, the government opted to wait until "after they had an opportunity to get as many shots in as many arms as they possibly could."

"This is the second time the DOJ is planning to intervene and to ask the court to dismiss the second amended complaint from Brook," Latypova said. "This clearly points to the U.S. government's desire to not investigate the clinical trial fraud for COVID-19 vaccines," she said.

Jackson said the DOJ still must show good cause, noting that a motion to dismiss "must be done in good faith and they must provide good cause — this is key, and why I am confident that these motions will be denied," she said.

"The government must show … why they have a reasonable argument that it is more likely than not that the downsides to the case exceed the upsides," Barnes said. "In a multi-billion-dollar case, what's that argument going to be from the Justice Department?"

Discovery could show government covered up vaccine adverse events

If the DOJ's motion to dismiss fails, the process of discovery will proceed and that may reveal more evidence of a possible government cover-up.

"We believe discovery will show the government wasn't conducting any meaningful investigation at all," Barnes said. "It was lying to Brook Jackson, it was lying to her counsel, and more importantly, to a certain degree, it was lying to the court."

"What was really occurring all along is that the Justice Department was deliberately slow-rolling the case for the benefit of Pfizer," Barnes added.

"We're going to ask to potentially receive some discovery in what that 14 months of government investigation looked like and why they chose to keep it under seal so long and at that point, dismiss … We want to know why," Jackson said.

As for what discovery may reveal, Latypova said she is "quite certain" that "it would confirm all allegations of fraud that have been observed by Brook — violations of the clinical trial protocol, unblinding, lack of proper informed consent, manipulation of data, hiding adverse events from the vaccines, and more."

"I hope that the discovery would also produce unredacted contracts between the Department of Defense and Pfizer," Latypova added.

The opportunity to file a second amended complaint also allowed more evidence to be incorporated into the case, Jackson said, as the previous complaint only allowed her to "claim what I knew as of September 2020."

"We found out more about the approval process through the FDA's release of the clinical trial documents. As more people came forward, as science evolved, we learned more," Jackson said.

According to Latypova, this new information includes preclinical studies from Pfizer and Moderna, human adverse event data from the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) and other databases, and "reports and published studies from thousands of physicians and injured people."

"The data is overwhelming, showing severe damage caused by these products," Latypova said. "The documentation also demonstrates that the manufacturers knew that the product is extremely dangerous … Yet, they lied about the product's safety, efficacy and manufacturing quality and took billions of dollars in taxpayers' money."

According to Barnes, constitutional issues will also be at play if the lawsuit proceeds. This includes "whether or not impermissible First Amendment issues are motivating the Justice Department in pursuing this case, a case that might embarrass the current administration that was in bed with Pfizer as to this vaccine."

"It's been four years of fighting a system that I thought was on our side," Jackson said. "We've lost sight of what, or rather who, the government serves. It's the people."

"I'll remind the powers-that-be in Washington once again that according to the U.S. Constitution, the government's job is to protect and serve the people. We are the sole interest, and we demand vindication."

"Forensic analysis reveals fraud in the data Pfizer had vs. the data Pfizer reported. There's a lot on Twitter these days, but this is HUGE".

"Our analysis revealed inconsistencies between the subject data listed in the 6-Month Interim Report and publications authored by Pfizer/BioNTech trial site administrators. Most importantly, we found evidence of an over 3.7-fold increase in number of deaths due to cardiovascular events in BNT162b2 vaccinated subjects compared to Placebo controls. This significant adverse event signal "was not reported by Pfizer/BioNTech". Potential sources of these data inconsistencies are identified." https://ijvtpr.com/index.ph...

It is a sad fact that the government in general, cares more about itself than it does about any aspect of those it governs. If anyone watches any of the congressional hearings it is blatantly apparent none of the alphabet agencies heads believe that they are accountable to anyone. They thoroughly avoid answering any question that would make them look bad or incriminate themselves or any of their cohorts. All this is possible because those in politics ignore the constitution to the detriment of the people.

That's their defense, strange as it is. They were given carte blanch, to supply a product that evaded all the legal oversights, and given legal protection. All governments sang from the same songbook. When harm was discovered it was ignored. At the "twenty-four-minute mark", the legal statement is made to the Judge to dismiss.

There is no "justice" in these legal machinations. The concept of justice has been lost. When I first had heard that Pfizer wanted the case dismissed because the government was actively colluding in the fraud that they (Pfizer) was committing, I thought it was a Babylon Bee episode. No it wasn't... and now the government is agreeing - if we knew or suspected that Pfizer was committing fraud, and had no problem with it, then, hey, it's not really fraud and there's nothing to see here. Move on.

It was a stupid setup to begin with, or rather, an intentional setup to begin with. The same organization can't both inspect the safety of vaccines, and be the promoter of vaccines, as well as be funded mainly by Big Pharma. It works well to cripple the health of the public, but it doesn't serve the public interest, and it never has.

The Black Robed DOJ must protect the public/private partnership of Big Pharmakeia eugenics program. They are experimenting on human populations and secrecy is imperative. If the truth were to see the light of day, the damage all these jabs are causing, there would be a revolt greater than ever imagined. The firm belief in safe and effective must be driven home and the evidence of all harm must be suppressed by any means. Ever since the mandatory childhood schedule autism, SIDS, asthma, allergies, immunological, respiratory and neurological diseases have grown exponentially year over year. They use the invisible never produced boogie man virus as cover for most of the damage. Do your own due diligence. Relying on knowledge from authority figures is like being blinded as it is wed to power and riches,.

Department of Justice...another corrupt agency supported by U.S.taxpayers. It does not know the meaning of the word justice. Public health Policy has been injuring and killing people for ages. Money means more to the people running the government than the people. Our Congress gave a profit seeking industry the right to injure and kill the recipients of its products... It passed The National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986 ... taking away any liability for injury or death caused by (so-called) vaccines.

What to expect from state bodies such as the DOJ? The state system is a system of slavery and at its core still pretty similar to the ancient Roman system. People need to stop hoping for a change through change of leaders, it won't happen. Let's remember who was in charge of this "warp speed" scam. Red and blue are obviously just 2 cheeks of the same arse. The only way out is not to accept the state authority any further, we were born free not due to a constitution but due to will of GOD, the only supreme authority. Declare yourself alive and free, walk out the tyranny.

Trump's continued promotion of Operation Warp Speed and mRNA injections is evidence that he is merely controlled opposition. Congress has been a tool of The Federal Reserve and by extension the Bank Of International Settlements since December 23rd, 1913 when it delegated its authority to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin to the Federal Reserve. The U.S. government has been controlled by that fascist oligarchy ever since.

If you'll notice, Trump hasn't mentioned Warp Speed nor the injections in quite some time. I'm thinking he's seeing the light, or at least a twinkling. At least I pray he is. Actually, I heard Trump brag to a reporter very recently about his big Warp Speed achievement. I was floored because obviously, he lives in a very insulated world. So the DOJ is making up things to suit themselves? Their reason for dismissal,

“The United States should not be required to expend resources on a case that is inconsistent with its public health policy,” the DOJ said in its motion to dismiss."

In the case of public health policy, fraud is the one thing that reverses Emergency Use Authorization and makes the companies liable for their actions. If that public health policy is based on fraud that would make this lawsuit very very relevant.

The PREP Act may provide for immunity from tort liability related to activities authorized under such authorities. More specifically, the PREP Act authorizes the HHS Secretary to issue a declaration (called a PREP Act declaration) that provides immunity (except for willful misconduct) for claims related to administration or use of countermeasures against CBRN agents to entities and individuals involved in the development, manufacture, testing, distribution, administration, and use of such countermeasures. The PREP Act authority, including the authority to issue PREP Act declarations, resides with the Secretary of HHS and has not been delegated to FDA.

Interesting that little phase "willful misconduct". Isn't that the whole point of this lawsuit? If there is proof of willful misconduct by these companies then their EUA status would be revoked. Hopefully retroactively for people to get justice who suffered under this fraud.

Doubt if anything changes until laws change. We basically have legal bribery in this country w/ lobbying. pHARMa is by far the largest donator to Congress/Senate campaigns in the Billions annually. The FDA/CDC CEO's push things through and then are rewarded with mega million positions at the pharma companies they help. Just research the Dr. Julie Gerberding case where she pushed through vax reform bounced the annual vax recs up (I believe from the 40s into the 70s by age 18), covered up the MMR scandal, fired the docs that blew the whistle and then took a 5M/year w/ Merck heading up Vax division. The whole thing is corrupt.

“Complete Fraud” - Nick Hudson Reveals the Deceit Behind Pfizer’s “95% Effective” Clinical Trials

“On any sensible clinical endpoint (hospitalization & severe disease), the vaccine arm of the phase three trials performed much worse than the placebo arm,” attested @NickHudsonCT

“And there was a basic fraud” to achieve the desired outcome of less COVID among the vaccinated than the unvaccinated, he shared.

“The way they achieved that was by implementing a subset study group inside the phase three trial to look at reactogenicity, which is ... side effects of the vaccine as a result of the immune reaction. And what the protocol led to [was] anybody who had COVID-like symptoms being excluded from the study without being PCR tested,” he explained.

“And this was a fraud because they knew from their earlier studies that people who took the vaccine in a reasonably high proportion would suffer from ... neutropenia and... lymphocytopenia, which are immune suppression conditions causing people to get COVID as a result of being vaccinated. So all those people who potentially had COVID were removed from the study once they generated COVID symptoms and not PCR tested on the way out.”

JAMA editorial: “Contrary to a wealth of misinformation available on social media and the internet, data from various studies indicate that since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic tens of millions of lives were saved by vaccination.”

A self serving statement by public health officials, with no actual evidence presented, to back it up. I have found there to be a wealth of disinformation by public health officials. MRNA stays in your arm. MRNA clears out within a few weeks. Safe and effective. Myocarditis is mostly mild. However, 67% of myocarditis patients needed medical intervention/hospitalization. Not mild.

Public health officials lack credibility.
